

National Get Outdoors Day (GO Day) Report 2011

July 20, 2011 (Washington, D.C.) - To combat the threats posed by today's indoor, inactive lifestyles – including the obesity epidemic and concern that today's kids will live shorter lives than their parents due to lifestyle choices – several hundred local, state and federal agencies, diverse nonprofit organizations in the health and youth-services fields, the recreation community and media interests teamed up to host the fourth annual National Get Outdoors Day (GO Day) on June 11, 2011. The national effort was again led by the U.S. Forest Service (FS) and the American Recreation Coalition (ARC), but the number and diversity of the organizations involved nationally and locally increased sharply. Uniting these partners was a shared belief in the mission of National Get Outdoors Day:

Unify public and private-sector interests in efforts to influence American lifestyles, especially among youth, in ways that maximize the physical, mental and other benefits derived from activities in the Great Outdoors through a focused effort to invite Americans to designated sites on a single day, as well as to highlight and assist the efforts of National Get Outdoors Day partners year-round.

GO Day 2011 was built around offering opportunities for American families to experience traditional and non-traditional types of outdoor activities, regardless of past experience, skills or ownership of equipment. Those Americans currently underserved by visits to public lands and waters and youth – especially urban youth – were priority targets for the events. GO Day organizers accepted a challenge: making the appeal of the Great Outdoors equal that of shopping malls and video games. And they met this challenge with exceptional results.

The fourth annual GO Day featured over 117 official sites in 36 states. Collectively, these sites welcomed almost 40,000 new faces to the joys and benefits of the Great Outdoors. GO Day events across the country helped support the First Lady's Let's Move Outside initiative, which seeks to eliminate childhood obesity within one generation by promoting healthy outdoor activity. Official GO Day sites across the nation included signature sites in Denver, Vancouver, Mesa (Arizona), San Bernardino (California), Apple Valley (Minnesota), Salt Lake City, Milwaukee, and Washington, D.C., and welcomed tens of thousands of new faces to the Great Outdoors.

GO Day activities at all of the sites provided introductions to active outdoor recreation opportunities as well as education. The activities ranged from recycling education, fishing education, and water safety, to casting technique, archery, hayrides, and fishing. Children participated in canoeing, nature walks, geocaching, high rope adventures, rock climbing, and mountain biking, and checked out environmental/ conservation education stations and camping demonstrations. Children participated in fire-fighting activities with a fire engine and associated equipment, and played outdoor games like jump roping, hula hoops and hopscotch. There was disc golf and model boat sailing, nature art, drawing, face painting as well as wildlife education featuring live animals. Joe Reilly, environmental educator and the official GO Day Troubadour, performed live in Ann Arbor, Michigan, and his song "Let's Go Outside" was played at locations across the country. A USDA People's Garden was installed by GO Day participants on Kingman Island in Washington, D.C. Information on the Presidential Active Lifestyle Award (PALA) was distributed to hundreds of children in the hopes of encouraging them to commit to regular physical activity. And many sites provided photo opportunities and a chance for children to interact with characters like Smokey Bear, Woodsy Owl, Bobber the Water Safety Dog and other interesting costumed characters.

The Fremont, California was a huge success, attracting over 2,000 participants from the San Francisco Bay area.

Some sites featured areas that focused on other aspects of healthy living, including sustainability, good nutrition and outdoor ethics. Overall, the goal was to ensure that the fun and excitement of GO Day triggered a resolution for participants to make getting outdoors part of their everyday lives.

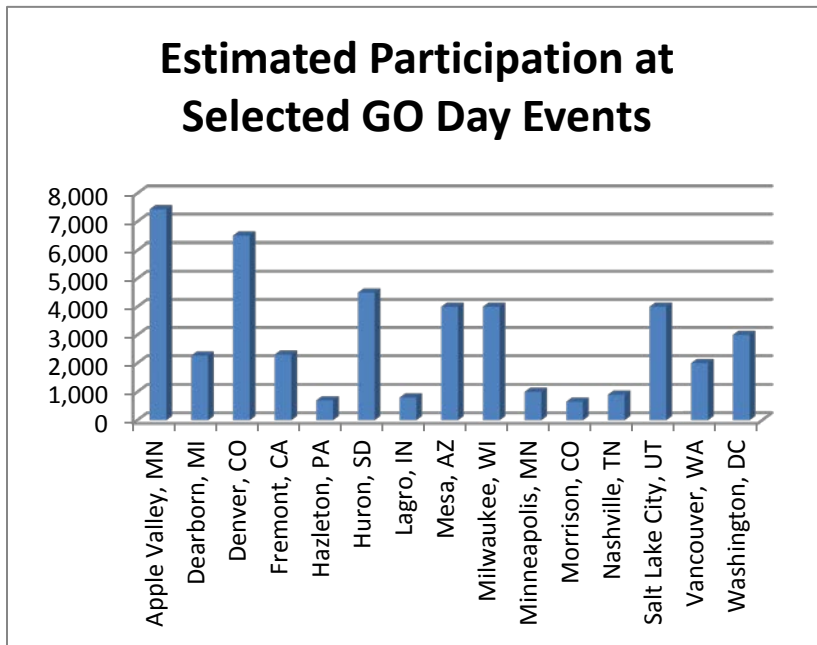

National Get Outdoors Day was launched on June 14, 2008, in response to a growing number of disturbing reports about today's youth, particularly in relationship to their health and daily activities. Today's American youth average 7.5 hours per day in front of a screen and are six times more likely to play a computer game than to ride a bike. Kids report that outdoor adventure is fun – but that outdoor activities are invisible, lost in a clutter of mass media ads, road signs and information over phones and computers, and overshadowed by malls offering food, friends and “perfect” weather. The USDA Forest Service and ARC agreed to lead an inclusive, nationwide effort focusing on a single day when people would be inspired and motivated to get outdoors. GO Day brought federal, state and local agencies, key enthusiast organizations and recreation businesses together to create a healthy, fun day of outdoor adventure aimed at reaching first-time visitors to public lands and reconnecting children to the outdoors.

The achievements of GO Day 2011 are impressive:

- 40,000 American families and children participated in GO Day events across the nation (see graph).

- Over 500 organizations made GO Day events possible due to their generous support, time and donations (a complete list of partners is available below).

- Giveaways donated by the U.S. Forest Service, REI, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and many more provided additional incentives for GO Day participants to enjoy the outdoors beyond June 11.
- 117 official sites in 36 states and the District of Columbia celebrated GO Day; additionally, there were a number of non-official sites that helped achieve GO Day goals.
- The GO Day Facebook page climbed to over 1,000 followers.
- GO Day enjoyed widespread media coverage, including over 1,000 print and online articles, radio spots, television and news features, YouTube clips, pages and articles on social media sites like Facebook and Twitter, and more.
- GO Day was specifically mentioned in two of almost 50 state proclamations of Great Outdoors Month, which provided a showcase for local actions by governors and mayors. President Obama also proclaimed June to be Great Outdoors Month.

The visibility of GO Day has only continued to increase as excitement about the event builds across the nation. Dramatic increases in partner organizations and media coverage demonstrate the growing enthusiasm and support for the event dedicated to getting people engaged in healthy, outdoor activities. The GO Day

National Coordinating Committee will continue gathering suggestions on how to build and improve GO Day events across the nation. The GO Day National Coordinating Committee welcomes any additional feedback from guests and participants of GO Day 2011. Plans for GO Day 2012 are already underway across the nation. If you would like to host a GO Day event in 2012, please contact Tom Georgevits at the American Recreation Coalition at tgeorgevits@funoutdoors.com or 202-682-9530.

GO Day is an outgrowth of the Get Outdoors USA! campaign, which encourages Americans, especially our youth, to seek out healthy, active outdoor lives and embrace our parks, forests, refuges and other public lands and waters. Working with the USDA Forest Service, Get Outdoors USA! hosted six recreation forums in early 2007 and learned that public lands were missing the right triggers to capture the attention of today's youth. The GO Day concept was first tested at the Outdoor Recreation Village at Super Bowl XLII in Glendale, Arizona, which drew over 100,000 visitors. For more information on the Outdoor Recreation Village, visit www.funoutdoors.com/node/view/2016

Thank you for all of your hard work in making this the best GO Day event yet!
